Many current EUS projects would relocate in the new 'settlement' and a flagship programme in childcare and preventative medicine is planned in honour of the work of the Dr Elsie Inglis.

The steering group which included representatives from the Medical Women's Federation, and and public health pioneer, she Edinburgh District Council's Women's Committee believe their proposals for the use of the site remain true to the memory and efforts of Elsie Inglis, sharing in her concerns for the social and later, the Elsie Inglis Memorial educational needs of all sectors of the community

Born in 1864, Dr Inglis, a graduate of Edinburgh, was the founder and driving force behind the Scottish Women's Hospitals for Foreign Service, an organisation which funded and equipped complete hospitals, transport columns and canteens to attend to Allied troops. A physician, surgeon devoted much of her energy to the poor, in particular mothers and children, and for the advancement of women in medicine. She died in 1917, and eight years as a tribute to her achievements.

Dr Jan Scott, president of the Scottish Eastern Association of the Medical Women's Federation added, "We welcome wholeheartedly this interesting an innovative proposal in which the memorial buildings will survive in an educational caring situation, Awareness and training are especially relevant today in the movement away from care in institutions towards care in the community."

The steering group have consulted closely with local residents and their representatives. "We have been been submitted."

Hospital was opened in Edinburgh overwhelmed by the tremendous support we have been given from all sectors of the public - both here and overseas," explained Nick Flavin. "Edinburgh University Settlement is the ideal organisation to perpetuate the memory of Elsie Inglis as the original Settlement was founded in Edinburgh in 1905 by her contemporaries, who shared the same concerns for the social and educational needs of all sectors of the community."

> A spokesman for Lothian Health Board said, "We are currenlty considering all offers that have

UNIVERSITY BOOKMARK

Each month The BULLETIN will list the latest titles from Edinburgh University Press and Polygon, with a chance for readers to win copies of their choice

...from Edinburgh University Press

Glasgow: The Making of a City Peter Reed (ed) cased £25 May The Modern Scottish Novel

G. Wallace & R. Stevenson paperback £14.95 May Scotland and the Age of Disruption Brown & Fry (eds) paperback £19.95 May

The Making of Classical Edinburgh AJ Youngson

cased £25 May Common Law & Feudal

Society in Medieval Scotland Hector MacQueen

cased £40 May

...from Polygon

Imelda and other stories John Herdman

paperback £7.95 May Heroes

Chris Hurford paperback £6.95 May

The Great Shadow House Essays on the Metaphysical

Tradition in Scottish Literature

paperback £11.95 May Stained Radiance

Leslie Mitchell paperback £7.95 May

The BULLETIN is offering a free hardback copy of any of the above books (or a choice of three paperbacks) to the first person 'out of the hat' who can answer the following question: J. Leslie Mitchell is the real name of which famous Scottish novelist? Answers please to: Alison Munro, Edinburgh University Press, 22 George Square, by 7 June 1993

Last issue's Bulletin's competition was won by Craig Menzies, a 4th year Economics student who correctly identified the name of New Lanark's American equivalent in Indiana as being 'New Harmony'.

If a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation Andrew Fletcher, 1655-1716, Scottish Patrio.

Though our more romantic side has some sympathy with Mr. Fletcher, we always offer our legal expertise without any song or dance.

Lindsays WS, Solicitors, II Atholl Crescent, Edinburgh EH3 8HE. Telephone 031-229 1212.

Issue Eight

19 May 1993

Settlement unveils plans for 'Care Village'

University Settlement bids to turn disused Elsie Inglis Hospital into Scotland's first 'Care Village'

The Settlement's plans for the site

n a bold and enterprising move, Edinburgh University Settlement have placed an 11th hour bid to turn the disused Elsie Inglis Memorial Maternity Hospital in Abbeyhill into the site for Scotland's first 'urban care village'

The plan relies on Lothian Health Board selling the 2.7 acre site to the charity for a figure believed to be close to £100,000. The site is commercially valued at around £650,000.

The hospital was built in 1925 from money left over from the Scottish Women's Hospitals teams and donations raised from around the world by public appeal. Care of the building and the endowment was handed over to the Health Board

At present, the Health Board are seeking permission to demolish the B-listed buildings and sell off the land to housing developers. This plan has met with opposition from planning officials who rejected Health Board proposals for a change of use for the

The Main Building as it is today Photo: james Monteith

Under the Settlement's proposal, the existing buildings would be converted to give accommodation and professional and vocational training facilities for community care workers. The 'care village' would also offer a wide range of therapy and teaching for the elderly, the disabled, the unemployed and people with learning difficulties.

Savs Settlement Director Nick Flavin, "This is a wholehearted bid in anticipation of a fulsome response from Lothian Health Board meeting us half way in, what is, an exciting and apt venture within the spirit of the new Community Care programme.

"Its virtue lies in the fact that important listed buildings could have been purpose built for the core activities of the 'care village'. The whole prospect of the initiative is enhanced by the addition of new facilities which include a swimming pool and sports complex which are integral to the programme and available for use by the local community.

continued Back Page

The University of Edinburgh News